DEATH PREVENTED WEBER'S ARREST.

Deputy Sheriff Found That Aged Resident of St. Louis County Had Succumbed to Cold.

John Weber, 75 years old, of Elmwood Park, St. Louis County, was found dead in his home yesterday morning, a victim of the intense cold.

The discovery of the body was made by John McMenamy, a neighbor, who, knowing that he had separated from his wife and was in feeble condition, went to the house to offer assistance,

Coroner Rech was notified and went to the place with Deputy Constable Bode. Bede had a warrant for Weber's arrest, which had been sworn out before Justice which had been sworn out before Justice Campliell by his wife, but instead of serving it, impaneled a jury for the inquest. Weber and his wife had lived unhappily for several years. Their quarriers were quarterly, occurring each time that the husband drew a poisson from the United State. Government:

Nathaniel L. Moffett and Wm. A. Cockreil, a fellow breker. The first event resulted in a draw, and the latter in a knock-out in favor of Cockreil.

The trouble grew out of an allegation made by Fath that Milliken had been instrumental in having Fath's son barred from the floor of the Exchange. The market was pretty fively at the time and brokers were thrusting their fingers at each other in lively competition for trade, when Fath bustled over to Milliken and began accusing him of interfering with his son's position.

Milliken, it is said, denied that he ever knew Fath had a son when Fath rushed at him with both hands. Milliken grabbed his opponent and a scuffle was on when Moffet, seeing Milliken in trouble, rushed forward to separate the combatants.
